Fête Report

Friday morning 5th July, a slow buzz of willing workers began beavering away to set up marquees, gazebos and sound systems, to mow lawns and put up signs. The idyllic backdrop of the Old Vicarage morphed from its slumber into a hive of activity. By the end of the day, the gardens and adjoining paddock were beginning to lift into life from the discussions, meetings, plans and sketches that had been deliberated over for the past months. Meticulous, military-precision planning was well and truly coming together with, at exactly 16:47, a Scorpion tank and Hong Kong Police armoured personnel carrier arriving down Church Lane. Were these to keep the anticipated crowds under control?!

Just as the sun was setting, another two large vehicles invaded the solitude of Church Lane. Not so eye catching this time, but the bouncy castle men and the portable loos!

As the sun rose on the Saturday morning, stallholders and volunteers began setting up their stalls and displays, with the church car park and drive in front of the Vicarage resembling a scene reminiscent of a week day M25 traffic jam! Wonderful smells wafted from Church View Cottage's kitchen, as 200 scones were baked in readiness for cream teas. By midday, all stalls and activities were ready for action, and the tidal wave of visitors began pouring down the Church steps and up from the Dingle. By all accounts, the gatekeepers took entrance fees from over 300 visitors.

By 1.00pm, all activities were in full swing. So much so that the Flying Pig ran out of their super tasty fresh rolls – service had to be put on hold whilst reinforcement supplies could be procured. Normal service was resumed within 20 minutes. Cream teas were being served right from when the first visitors came through the gates until the last and the bar saw a constant draw of customers for real ale, Pimm's and soft drinks.

Stallholders on the lawn were rushed off their feet all afternoon with a busy flow of willing customers parting with their money after strong haggling; the paddock area also saw constant activities - smashing plates, bouncing in the inflatable castles, and ducks were hooked, whilst the well-stocked plant stalls and book tables groaning with their wares.

By the end of the afternoon, exhausted stallholders and volunteers began the mammoth clear up and, within an hour or so, tranquility had resumed, with just an empty marquee and handful of straw bales left to deal with the following day. Tables and chairs were repatriated to their respective village halls, and the very few leftover plants snaffled up to become permanent fixtures in the Royal Oak gardens.

The bean counters worked tirelessly into the night to see how much had been raised and, just like election ballot papers, an early result was announced on Sunday morning, indicating a preliminary result in the region of £5,000 – a superb result by all accounts!

So where does all this money end up?

Well in a nutshell, this year the PCC has directed some of the fete income towards the replacement roof at St Mary's. The remainder going towards the annual running costs of our two churches, namely for the electricity, insurance and routine maintenance.

The PCC would like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank everyone who has helped make this year's fete a tremendous success. Apart from the weather playing a major part, we would like to pay special thanks to Molly & Charlie for kindly letting the fete happen within their gardens and paddock and to Hazel for opening it. Without naming individuals, as there isn't enough space for Mogs to fit them into this piece(!), our thanks go out to the army of volunteers, donators and visitors for making it such a wonderful day.

Flagged Up

Hinton Parva Village Hall has a flag pole from which the Union Jack flag is flown most of the time. Our problem in this Ridgeway Village is the wind! The flag is often taken down in gale force weather but, very often, too late to avoid whipping damage to the material. The flag was replaced seven years ago but it has already been kindly repaired and repaired again. It would be wonderful if there was a device which lowered the flag when the wind speed exceeds 10 miles per hour!

It is time to replace the flag, but they do not come cheap. If you enjoy seeing the flag flying, then please send me a donation. It will be acknowledged and very much appreciated.

Upfront at the Village Hall

The roof on the Hall has now been completely replaced. Not just the main hall, but also the flat roof annex which contains the toilet block, cleaning equipment cupboard, table and chair storage, etc. The Committee are now looking at improving the area at the front of the hall. This area is bounded by the front door, telephone box, flag pole and main road. Most of this frontage is surfaced in dilapidated and uneven tarmac. And then there is the chain link fencing, erected in the eighties to prevent parking against the building. The plan is to resurface the frontage with new tarmac. If you have views on this proposal, then please let the committee and myself know them. How much of this area should be for dropping off guests at the hall and how many spaces reserved for disabled parking? At present, there is freedom for all on vehicle movements. It works pretty well but can it be improved? Let us know .

Sprucing up the Village Hall, Bishopstone – Hedgehogs, Vipers and Mutant Hebes

Footpath 14 - no vipers here!

We are pleased to report that the Team from Nationwide have volunteered to return. Influenced without doubt by Roz's banqueting skills.

Tuesday 20th of August is the date. If you are inclined to join us on that day, many paint brushes make light work; we would be very pleased to see you. Let us know (catering).

There will be a full programme that day, (subject to the vagaries of our summer weather).

Outside walls: Washing down, filling cracks, making good, removing ivy etc. in preparation for a fresh coat of pink (or similar).

Inside: A second coat of satin (Heritage Elephant shade of grey) to the wooden panelling.

In addition, the large Hebes which are now taking up half of the width of Footpath 14 (between the hall and the school) will be cut back to almost nothing. The Parish Council has been having problems with the drains at The City, Nell Hill and this footpath; a lot of the problems are caused by the excess vegetation on surrounding verges.

The garden on this bank was planted in the year 2000, in memory of Frank and Nancy Harding.

James Andrews, our handy local wildlife expert, has made a preliminary inspection to ensure we won't be disturbing any nesting birds, hedgehogs, vipers etc.

And, finally, we need a volunteer gardener/s. to trim the hedges, cut the grass, snip back any overhanging vegetation. Not too arduous, and will make such a difference.

Bobbing About roving reporter etc. PS and by the way, anybody seen the Christmas tree?

The Village Hall, Bishopstone is a registered charity, no. 271165.

Jojo's Dairy

I was delighted when I discovered that I could purchase local milk instead of buying it from the supermarket, and at a dispensing machine that one can visit at any time. I took the Rabble (if you don't know them, better not to ask) and they were thrilled and amazed to watch the cows being milked, and, better still, had a go on a tractor.

Now, even better, there are glass bottles. But here is my dilemma. Not having a family, I don't use that much milk. I can tootle down to Lower Wanborough and buy about 5 plastic bottles and keep them in the freezer. I don't think that you can do that with the glass ones. So that would mean lots of driving to collect them, which would cancel out the environmentally friendly use of glass. The only solution that I can think of is for us to organise collections, say twice a week, for us in the parish that use Jojo's milk and cut down on all that fossil fuel.

Any thoughts anybody?

Dickie's Diary

by Richard Green

Boring to many, but gardeners and farmers cannot just ignore weeds. A weed has been defined as a plant out of place. I quite like looking at pretty Himalayan Balsam but, in the wrong place, it has a terrible reputation. In garden, the Black Bindweed (Convolvulus), Ground Elder, and Marestail in sandy areas, can be a real nuisance.

I am just old enough to remember the start of herbicide spraying of arable crops on the farm; the red blush of a field poppies above the crop, the vibrant yellow of invasive weeds such as charlock and corn marigold, the problems with the three polygamums, black bindweed, redshank and knotgrass. Recently, on a wildlife holiday centred on the Cevennes plateau north of the Mediterranean in France, I saw three more old arable weeds grown in organic cereals that I had only read of, but had never seen before. These were pretty corn cockles and pheasant eye, also the lovely blue of corn flower. They were weeds, but I enjoyed seeing them and they were not doing much harm.

When I took over Rectory farm in 1973, our main arable weeds were couch grass, onion couch and wild oats. Before that, couch was weakened, (killed is too definite a claim) by a summer fallow or by raking up into heaps and burning. Onion couch has bulbs instead of rhizomes and my college lecturer advised seven spring crops and November ploughing. Glyphosate (Roundup) came to the rescue and has allowed control since. I have always had a crusade against wild oats. We are still roguing them out by hand onto a bonfire. Our fields are fairly clean, but reinfection from fields around us is still a problem, so you have to be vigilant because the seeds are carried by birds and wind.

In late May and early June crops can look immaculate on a drive by and then the weeds start to spoil the party by getting above the crop for all to see. Today our problem weeds are black-grass which we can only try to reduce to manageable levels by rotation and by later autumn planting. We badly need a more effective herbicide. Cleavers or Goose grass can still be a problem. Cranesbill, a prostrate plant of the geranium species, can be difficult. Very recently, Fools Parsley is proving our latest difficult arable weed. We can control it in cereals but this year it is out of control above our oil seed rape crops in a significant area, and the yield of rape will be minimal. By the time this appears, the combine will hopefully be busy, so a few more weeks of sunshine please.

School Report

Unbelievably it is the end of the school year . . . where did it go? We are very proud of our Year 5 and Year 6 children, who won Junior Good Citizen 2019 this year. This event takes place over a morning and the children rotate round a carousel of activities that look at their understanding and knowledge for general citizen type occurrences. This included how to act when near a train line, fire hazards in the home, strangers that you must not approach/go with, talks from the police, behaviour around dogs, impact of alcohol on behaviour, knife crime, online safety . . . and, clearly, we have very clued up children who shone with their knowledge to beat all the other Swindon schools that took part (there were many!).

We have had our new Reception children visit us. We have a full cohort again and are very much looking forward to welcoming the children and their families into our school community.

As we gather speed now to term's end we had a wonderful family BBQ, organised by FOBS at Alfresco. Games, sunshine and a super raffle followed by yummy food and drink . . . what more could we wish for?

We will be saying bye-bye on Tuesday to our superstar Year 6 children. We will miss them hugely as they all add such valuable dimensions to the school. I am very lucky, in that I get to see the Ridgeway bus pull in daily, so at least I will get to check in still, us teachers just can't help it, even once they have moved on! A huge good luck to Amelie, Crystal, Frank, Laila and Liam. Within school, thankfully, we have no staffing changes this year. We will all be back and ready to go in September!!

The Vicar's Letter

Dear Friends and Neighbours

So, the end of another academic year has been reached. And with good weather to boot. Hopefully, we will have plenty of opportunity to enjoy the company of family, friends and neighbours; either at home or perhaps away. As well as individual academic achievement, as a nation we haven't done too badly from a sporting perspective either. It's a tradition that after Evensong at St Andrew's we re-lubricate our vocal cords. The venue for this was brimming with anticipation; there was both excitement and a request for prayer. Lewis Hamilton had won the British Grand Prix earlier in the day and the Men's finals at Wimbledon had just finished after a very long tiebreak. With the birth of cricket taking place in a village not far from Portsmouth, it was lovely to witness the national team win the world cup and bring it home as it were. Our emotions were given a lot of opportunity to be exercised as a result, and what fun it was. Our vocal cords needed a bit more lubrication after that too!

While Sir Edmund Hillary undoubtedly had a sense of achievement once he'd conquered Everest, the enormity of it wouldn't necessarily have been as powerful as when he got to share that success with so many others. Sir Alec Rose and Sir Robin Knox Johnson were greeted at the end of their circumnavigation of our planet by large crowds, and to go from immense isolation to enjoying the warmth and adulation of the nation must have been both powerful and dramatic. At the bedside of someone who has just died, as well as the tears, there are often moments when fond memories give way to funny stories of a life well lived. It's a privilege whenever people feel able to share these tales of someone so loved. Sir Jackie Stewart and others are hanging onto memories of someone they love deeply. The difference being that their loved one is still with them. Dementia is a cruel illness that seems to be affecting more and more of us. All of this speaks to me very powerfully. In the first instance we'd be mad not to grab every opportunity that life brings along. And sharing these events can bring so much joy to friends and to family. They can also keep us going when times are tough. Sharing doesn't do us any harm either, especially those moments when things don't quite go to plan. An ability not to take ourselves too seriously, and perhaps the ability to laugh at ourselves, are a huge clue that we recognise that mercy and compassion are a lot better for us, and those we live with, than any amount of criticism and argument. Our sports stars have excelled as a result of understanding and believing that they can do something, rather than focusing on what they can't. They have excited so many of us as a result, and for this we give thanks. The second thing, for me at least, is that Jesus has paved the way for us to believe that we too have been created for great things. Both in this life and in the next. For this too we give thanks. So, during this season of sunshine I offer you the following adjusted blessing; may the road rise up to meet you. May the wind be always at your back. May the sun shine warm upon your face; the rains fall soft upon your fields and until we write again, may God hold you in the palm of His hand.

Fake News

or was it?

Do you remember that April fool report in 2017 on contactless collections? Basically a gismo was being installed in the church porch that would automatically remove money from people's cash card without them knowing. Ashionishingly, some people actually believed it. Well some things come true, almost. Our vicar was running a Vestry bar at the fête where there was a gismo enabling folks to pay for their drinks contactlessly and get cash back.

Never say never.

Bishopstone & District Gardening Club

We've done remarkably well this year for gardening club speakers; however, sudden illness can scupper the best laid plans. It was such a shame that our speaker couldn't make it on 10th July, but a croaky-voice-giving virus put paid to her talk about Michaelmas Daisies. We will invite her back next year.

4th July, and eighteen of our members set off at Ooo-too-early-o'clock in the morning for the Hampton Court Palace Garden Festival. It was a fabulous day and mighty hot, as we discovered, once we disembarked from the air-conditioned coach. Lots of walking, huge crowds, and so much to see. We were all very sensible, having slathered ourselves in high factor sunscreen and, we did manage to stay hydrated with a Pimms or three. Favourite Show Gardens: The gold medal winning, Thames Water Flourishing Future Garden, designed by Tony Woods, featuring a long tunnel, billed as a fun walk-through experience for children but which worked equally well for a spot of shade; A silver medal went to, A Place to Meet, designed by Cherry Carmen, an urban garden on several levels, combining wildlife-friendly planting with moving water and featuring a plunge pool to soak away the stresses of hot summer days. (I have to tell you, only a sense of decorum prevented me from hurling myself over that fence straight into the inviting water.) Many of the gardens featured themes like global impact and drought resistant planting. Appropriately for our ecologically-minded villages, the BBC Springwatch garden was all about re-wilding the garden, opening up boundaries, conversing with our neighbours, and caring for wildlife. Says it all really.

Just to say that the four of us from Ashbury really enjoyed the talk on bee keeping.

The speaker was very interesting although I find it hard to believe that any insect as clever as a bee thinks that the centre of a dandelion is red, as unlikely as Russell's Andean potato having any connection with Hockerbench!

Our eccentric, and occasionally odd, little pub and mini hotel is the immediately obvious public face of the organic farm all round you, and, possibly slightly less well known, the organic meat trading and HB branded goods marketing and selling business. The business that created the orange pig logo that you can find in retailers from Truro to Inverness, if you look hard enough, and everywhere on the interweb if that's your thang. What it allows us to gain is an insight into how bigger businesses operate in this global world of food, and an hour or two spent watching the way huge food factories operate is a shocking, and at the same time amazing, experience. In mid-July, two of us spent some time in a bacon factory in Suffolk, where weekly, even at this quiet time of year, they are making 700 tonnes a week of every bacon type you can imagine (our business produces just less than one tonne a week...). Making it in ways you can't begin to imagine. When bacon was first discovered, almost certainly by chance, it was the interaction between salt and raw meat—the flavour is obviously from salt, but there was something else at work, giving the distinctive pink colour, and a way of keeping meat fit to eat through long periods without it rotting. It seems the chemicals at work were nitrates, turning into nitrites, as chemists later discovered. The salting process could take weeks, and longer if you wanted it to, or were not hungry yet! So you could kill a pig in December, say, and start eating the bacon (or the hams) in January, or anytime as winter progressed, without fear of food poisoning. Now, the great food industry enlightenment means you can kill a pig today and start eating the bacon in two or three days' time, if you want. Time is expensive in any industry, so the quicker the better, and cheaper of course. You can buy bacon for giveaway money, and with it you can buy effectively handfuls of water, or a dilute phosphate solution. Wonder why your bacon cooks with a white froth? It's the phosphate they add to the salts and the nitrites, with the phosphate being added (injected) so that the meat retains the water. If you look at the back of the pack, and understand it, you'll see that the end product is heavier than the amount of meat that went into it in the first place. Cheap bacon is cheap because...well, you've probably got it by now! Another reason why organic seems more expensive—we're not selling you water! But it's not all negative—we watched as 60 women (and one man) stood at stainless steel tables in a working temperature of 5-7deg for 8 hours at a time, with two or three 15 minute breaks, for £8-10/hour, making that old Xmas favourite pigs in blankets. That's a little chipolata wrapped in a slice of streaky bacon, favoured for generations as the luxury accompaniment to the roast turkey. Being the society we are, we now apparently want pigs in blankets all year round, so what you want you shall have. This is a wholly manual operation, and these Portuguese, Lithuanian and Polish women (and one Romanian man) now each make a pack of pigs in blankets every single minute. 10 pigs per pack. This year, in this factory, they will make 60 million individual items, 6 million packs. 60 million sausages (enough to stretch twice round the equator), all handled by these 60 people. What I find amazing is the ability of the human race to cooperate and come up with these sorts of solutions, and that people are prepared to come to work in a cold factory at 6.00am, dress themselves up in hairnets, rubber boots, and plastic gloves, roll a piece of bacon round a sausage, all for less money than most of us expect to earn. Out of the 550 people on the factory floor, about 30 of them are UK-born citizens. Oh dear, I've got all political again. Anyway, bacon and politics to one side, keep an eye out for Luiza Stancu, Polish pop superstar and women's rights campaigner (I've been told), and her new work coming out of Hinton Parva—and an appearance at Ye Olde Royal Oak this autumn; and, as you read this, Australian fast bowler Jason Gillespie speaks at the pub, 29th July, on why the Aussies are suddenly so useless at cricket. It won't last....

Who stole the pavements?

Many years ago, when the Mantelpieces were young and shiny, they went on a holiday in the countryside. Readers, we were city dwellers, who had never experienced life in the sort of place that is devoid of street lamps and pavements. As we drove around narrow lanes, with high hedges and no stepping-off points, we were shocked to find there were those who put their lives in danger by walking down the road. How, we said, can people be so reckless; if there is no pavement, they clearly shouldn't be walking here. I know, I know - but his childhood in London hadn't prepared my Dearly Beloved for life in the countryside. And, even growing up in the wilds of Yorkshire, we had street lamps and pavements, onto which the horse-drawn carriages never strayed. Urchins could play safely when they'd finished their sixteen hour shifts in the dark satanic mills. The countryside seemed very dangerous to us.

These days, we appreciate that life in a village would be a very isolated affair if one only walked on roads with pavements. In fact, we'd never leave the house at all, except by car - which is, clearly, no good for either our health or the environment. Now I must issue a grumble alert - some people have not come to this conclusion, and they drive on a daily basis through our villages with no thought for potential pedestrians. Some drive with no thought for other cars, either; a straw poll of the Mantelpiece family has turned up two damaged wing mirrors in the space of a few months, caused by people who either didn't know the width of their cars, or who were allergic to hedges, so had adopted a very central position on the road, so as to be as far away from them as possible.

When we're out walking we make every effort to assist passing traffic and avoid death. At those points where visibility is poor and overtaking is a hazardous operation, DB and I always stop and direct traffic accordingly. Clearly, it's not only damage to ourselves that we avert, but also potential bending of car bumpers, or worse. You'd think drivers would be grateful for our concern; some are, but, a few days ago, a woman in a nifty little sports car gave me a glare that would have put Medusa to shame. And our own venerable Sub Editor was given a two fingered salute when she prevented a motorist from driving around her into the path of an oncoming car. Perhaps these are people who live in the centre of Swindon, and who are innocent of the ways of village living. Let's be generous, and assume they're not our near neighbours. . .

In a previous life, in a village somewhat north of here, we had similar issues. On one occasion, a driver actually stopped after she had remodelled my wing mirror. It's impossible to drive round here without that happening, isn't it?, she said, It's always happening to me.

Funny, I replied, This is the first time that it's happened to me. Perhaps she's followed me here. . .

Mrs Mantelpiece

And Almost Finally...

Oh Mrs M, the countryside is indeed a deeply dangerous place, but it is also wonderful.

Boon breaks out into bucolic mode. Opening my back door the other morning to let Fox out, I was surprised to see a young hare grazing under the apple tree; Fox was so stunned at first he just gaped at it. I walked towards it, hoping it would flee before he could catch it, but hare just shrugged and carried on feeding. Then I came to my wits and grabbed Fox, who had just gone into hunting mode. The hare lolloped nonchalantly off and a nasty accident was averted.

The interaction between animals is very interesting. The muntjacs that sometimes inhabit my garden (yes they can eat my flowers, I've got plenty) simply hate the cats. The buck has staring competitions with Fox and the doe stamps her pretty little feet at Frank, to no avail, but yey! our hedgehog is back and spends time with them in happy commune.
