New High Speed Broadband Services Launched for Bishopstone and Hinton Parva

After much hard work I am delighted to announce that (for most of our Parish*) we now have available two new high speed broadband services !

These new services are both now live and are available through two local Service Providers - CCE Services (of Badbury) and Cotswold Wireless (of Cirencester). Both services offer download speeds of up to 40Mb/s but tests in Bishopstone show that our actual speeds will be between 15-30Mb/s. This is still 10x faster than any existing Broadband speeds currently available in Bishopstone. This level of download speed is perfect for multiple streams of internet TV through BBC iPlayer, ITV Player, YouTube etc as well as for intensive business uses like video conferencing etc. The services being launched start at £25/month plus installation costs - each service providers offering is slightly different so do investigate them both.

Please contact each service provider using the contact details below to set up a site survey for your property and get your own personalized quotation.

Parish may receive these services. That said tests done by myself (on behalf of the Parish Council) and the cellular network operator (UK Broadband) have shown that the majority of properties in Bishopstone should be able to receive these services. No testing has been conducted yet in Hinton Parva so please engage one of these service providers to see if your location is covered.

An Invitation: come and have a drink and a chat with a bunch of friendly flower arrangers

St. Swithun's has a really jolly band of flower arrangers but we could do with a few more - so, if anybody is remotely interested in flowers, trying your hand at arranging, just being social or desperately in need of a drink, why don't you pop in to St. Swithun's on the morning of Saturday, 14th September, say 11.30am? We will be throwing together, no, no I mean carefully decorating the church for the Harvest Service, the next day. There will be a couple of bottles (I know that the sun won't be over the yard arm) and some nibbles, might even run to coffee. Bring a friend, let's make it a party.

If you have an urge to talk about this, you can contact:

Gemma's Story

March last year is when my journey and discovery of faith began. My Nan suddenly passed away, although she had angina her overall health had started to improve but I suppose that is what life is about. You never know what's going to happen next. My mum and I were very close to her so this was a very distressing time. During the time of arranging the funeral I met Sandy, she was going to be conducting the ceremony. As soon as we met her we felt comfortable, she genuinely cared for us and would be there for us whenever we needed her, day or night, to answer any questions or just for support. We then started to go to church every week, we were surprised how much we enjoyed it, everyone was so welcoming and it had such a joyful atmosphere. We became friends very quickly. I haven't been well for a few years, last April I needed another operation, it seemed to be one after another (I ended up having 12 ops in a year). Sandy would come up to visit me many times in Oxford, she would make me laugh. During another hospital stay mum mentioned to me that she was considering being baptised and confirmed and asked if I would also.

After deciding I would we started attending classes each week to learn about the church, what its actually about, why it means so much, how it helps people of all ages, gender, background. I didn't want the classes to stop as I enjoyed learning it all but also because for the first time in years and years I felt able to express myself without fear of being judged by others. Without realising how quickly time had sped by it was confirmation day, I wasn't nervous more excited. Inside the church the bishop started his sermon, he was wearing very colourful robes and spoke in a way that meant even those who did not believe or had doubts also listened intently.

We were asked if we wanted to speak, I very much wanted to and have written what I wanted to say. Again for some strange reason I wasn't nervous it just felt right and comfortable. I read: What's good today is there are many more questions to ask, knowledge to know, mysteries to discover and people to meet on this journey. The learning and believing does not stand still after this ceremony but instead grows and grows. To me this confirmation says that I do believe in God and Jesus, I do believe the stories in the bible that have been told for thousands of years and that I do believe and trust the teachings of the Lord. The guidelines to help true Christians keep on the correct path for the correct reasons. After today there is only one person who knows how our lives are going to turn out and whether or not we make good decisions following his teachings.

There is a back-story for every person in this room as to why they are in this church, what has happened in each of our lives to bring us here. Love, hate, loss, trust, pain, no one lives a perfect life, no one is always happy. Things happen in life that can tear us apart or bring us closer together. I feel in life it is guaranteed bad things will happen but life is what you make it as many good things happen too. Sometimes losing a loved one causes so much pain but it also teaches us love and how much that means, as the saying goes- its better to have loved and lost than to never have loved at all. In life you get some people who are strong Christians from birth to death but I am not one of those.

When I was a young child I did believe in god, Jesus and all the stories and teachings, then my mum got cancer when I was only six, my dad had to deal with two young children and a very ill wife. He somehow managed to do this and my mum amazingly beat the cancer. Then through the years my mum got seriously ill again and would recover each time. I lost many family members to death very quickly, people kept dying and each time is felt like I kept getting knocked down. Then in my teens I had my own problems as I couldn't cope with all the illness and death, I had someone to talk to but it helped only a little. Then the worst thing happened when my Nan died, we were inseparable and with mum called ourselves the three musketeers. She was more than just a nan she was my best friend, could talk to her about everything. Then we met Sandy, the vicar- had a heart of gold who would do anything for mum or I. We could trust her, my mum, dad and brother Alex. Through the past few months I began thinking about God again. I realised God didn't cause any of the bad things to happen, he is not to blame. Instead he gave me the tools to help me through and to be able to see the silver lining in hard times. I have to do it for myself, but he will hold my hand and help me along. A Christian relationship to God will never stop growing; confirmation really is just the start. God cared for everyone, even those who make mistakes, he never gives up helping and loving. Whatever path you choose in life we will all end up in the same spot. You never lose someone forever, just for a short time, it is comforting to know I will never be alone; he will always be there. A lot of people came up to me after my speech and told me it touched them; I was shocked by the amount of support I had with people being so kind. I have quite low confidence in myself in general but after the ceremony I was speaking with my mum saying it has made me happier and more confident. My mum told me that now she is baptised and confirmed she feels part of the family, not just mine but also everyone in the church. It feels like another family member, a lifeline. Everyone confirmed that day was: Steve Knowles, Orgest Proshi (also baptised), Ann Stone, Katherine Masters, Katrina Morrison, Olga Smith, Jane Brown (also baptised), Leasha John, Tom Taylor, Doug Stevens and myself. They were all lovely people who were a pleasure to meet and I hope to keep in contact with them regularly. Good luck to you all and God bless. Thank you everyone who made that day so special showing love and open arms to us all.

Have you seen all these photographs of village events?

We have so many pictures of fêtes and flower shows, the villages in the snow and summer meadows, street parties and pig racing, church flowers and the shinanigins of the Garden Club, craft shows and the jubilee and others too numerous to mention. Andy Greenhalgh is beavering away to get files of pictures on line, so go and have a look at them on;

The Fête Dig Continues.....

.....at this year's Country Garden Fête we put in a small trial trench (1 metre x 2 metres), much to our surprise, uncovering medieval walling (see picture on the left) medieval pottery and animal bone, as well as Roman pottery, possible Saxon pottery and Bronze Age pottery and flint.

We really wanted to have a futher look at the walls and, happily, were allowed to continue digging. The northern end of the trench was enlarged to excavate the stones in the bottom left of the picture which revealed that they were the stone walls of semi-sunken building (see picture below).

There are still more questions to answer. What is the extent of the building? What was it's purpose? Is the gully to the north the doorway to the cellar? If anybody would like to try their hand at archaeology we would appreciate some volunteers to help us answer these questions. For more infomation get in touch with me:

The Royal Oak Diary

Mogs Boon, the editor of this esteemed organ, is very good at bashing tardy contributors over the head with a metaphorical rolling pin, so we write this in between moving our best sofas into the pub garden since we're obviously, according to the appalling Daily Express (banned from this pub) going to be running at 90deg from now till Christmas.

The sofas will remain there, thro' snow, rain and storms, right through to the Royal Oak Summer Party on Saturday 31st August, from noon till midnight. We can't promise the weather, but we can promise you:

- Farm tours, on foot and on trailers
- Butchery demonstrations
- Birds of prey in the garden
- Food and drink in the garden all day—including three GUEST BEERS
- Stunning wildlife photography from the farm by Elliott Neep, currently trying to sleep with the badgers
- Live music, including Breeze, Cheesehouse Band and the Bob Bowles Band, from 5.30pm
- A Village Feast—lamb from our firepit, slow pulled pork from the wood oven, bowls of crayfish, big tables, talk to people you might not know, and who aren't as awful as you imagined...we will charge for the village feast and music, probably about £20 per head, less for kids. And we'll erect a sort of marquee to avoid sunstroke. More details to follow, including the men's cake baking competition.

And then, due to popular demand, a Royal Oak exclusive track day at Castle Coombe, 17th September. All day, great lunch, unlimited laps, bring your own car, £145.00 per head one car one driver; and £110.00 per head one car two drivers. This will be over subscribed after the success of the one in March. Please book via the pub or contact through the website. Still looking for two great chefs to come and run the food here from late September. Spread the word, if you can. No news on old bottles or dogging at The True Heart, sad to say, as I write this.

We hope to see you sometime. Happy summer.

Tim Finney

PAVLOVA (OR AS AUSSIES WOULD SAY, PAV)

In writing this article I have also been enlightened about the place of the pav in Australia's food history. My long held belief that it was an Australian invention has been challenged! Pavlova is essentially a mixture of egg whites and sugar, topped with cream and fresh fruit, named after the famous Russian ballerina Anna Pavlova. Believed to have been created in her honour during one of her tours to Australia and New Zealand in the 1920s. The nationality of its creator has been a source of argument. It is a popular dessert and an important part of the national cuisine of both countries, and with its simple recipe, is frequently served during celebratory and holiday meals. It is identified with summer, but is eaten all year round in both countries.

After all my reading and research I have decided that this quote from the ninemsn website sums up my revised stance on the subject: It seems fairly conclusive that New Zealanders first developed the recipe for a meringue cake - sometimes called pavlova. However, it was when a Perth based chef, Bert Sachse, developed his pavlova recipe that the name and the current recipe become more widely known around the world.

For a different slant on the traditional pav I have included a recipe for a pavlova roulade. It is a lovely soft meringue and absolutely delicious. If you wanted a complete recipe or a copy of my 'never fail' traditional pav recipe don't hesitate to email.

SOFT PAVLOVA ROULADE WITH MASCARPONE AND BERRY COULIS

250g mascarpone - 1 ½ tbs icing sugar mixture - 1 tbs Grand Marnier liqueur - 7 egg whites - 1 ¾ cups (375g) caster sugar - 2 tsp cornflour - 2 tsp white vinegar - Extra icing sugar- to dust

1. Combine mascarpone, icing sugar & Grand Marnier. Cover and place in fridge to firm.
2. Preheat oven to 160°C. Grease and line a 24 x 30cm Swiss roll pan.
3. Beat the egg whites to soft peak. Gradually add caster sugar while whisking until thick and glossy and sugar dissolves. Fold in cornflour and vinegar. Spread into prepared pan.
4. Bake 20 minutes till just firm. Remove from oven, stand for 3 minutes. Lay a clean tea towel on bench. Top with a large sheet of baking paper dusted with extra icing sugar. Turn pavlova out onto baking paper, leave 10 minutes to cool.
5. Spread mascarpone mixture along the long side. Carefully roll pavlova, using the paper and tea towel as a guide. Keeping pavlova wrapped in baking paper & tea towel put on a tray and refrigerate overnight to set.
6. Unwrap and place roll onto a serving platter. Top with fresh berries. Drizzle with a berry coulis.

And Finally.....

.....I'm not wearing a vest any more, wow isn't it hot? At least it is as I write this, 8.00am and all the window are wide open, the cats keep jumping in and out, just because they can.

Now a confession, OK, I admit it I've joined that band of renegades who call themselves the Garden Society. I kept sidling into their meetings, the topics of the talks are always so interesting and the trips to gardens and the willow weaving workshops (see pictures www.bishopstoneandhintonparva.org) are such fun. My ambition, when I win the lottery, is now to enter Chelsea Flower Show, well if I had so much money I would be able hire a gardener to help me, wouldn't I?

It has become traditional to include an apology as part of my editorial, one has to respect tradition so here goes. Last month I forgot to credit Thomas Millyard and Bernard Phillips who supplied me with lots of great pictures of the fête, sorry chaps.
